OUR STORY

InterContinental Melbourne The Rialto is steeped in the rich legacy of Melbourne's past, beautifully captured in the 1890s neo-Gothic architecture of the Rialto building. Originally built in 1891 during Melbourne's Gold Rush, the Rialto and Winfield buildings were at the heart of a thriving commercial centre, designed by renowned architects William Pitt, Richard Speight Jr. and Charles D'Ebro. Today, the hotel preserves this heritage, seamlessly blending history with luxury.

Recognised as one of Melbourne's high society and renowned for her lavish afternoon teas, the wife of architect Charles D'Ebro has inspired the hotel to reimagine an afternoon tea experience that honors and combines Australia's history and land.

The Rialto building stands proudly as a protected landmark by the National Trust of Australia (Victoria) and listed on the Victorian Heritage Register - a testament to Melbourne's golden age and our commitment to timeless elegance.
